PAW PAW, MICHIGAN, APRIL 14, 1876.

Republican State Convention.

A Republican State Convention, to elect twenty-two delegates and alternates to attend the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati, on the 15th day of June next, and also to elect a Republican State Central Committee, will be held at the city of Grand Rapids, on Wednesday, the 10th day of May, 1876, at eleven o'clock A. M.

All Republican electors and other voters, without regard to past political differences or previous party affiliations, who believe in and support the principles enunciated in the call for the National Republican Convention, are invited to participate in the election of delegates to that Convention.

The several counties will be entitled to four delegates for each Representative in the lower branch of the State Legislature; and every organized county having no representation will be entitled to two delegates.

Under the resolution of 1858, no delegate will be entitled to a seat who does not reside in the county he represents.

S. S. GORD, Secretary.

Danvers, February 1st, 1876.

Dated, February 14, 1876.

The Queen has repaid Israel for his loyal efforts to have her transformed into an Empress by presenting him with her portrait painted in oil by a German artist.

The "red" fever is unabated. Some of the citizens of Manchester, New Hampshire, are going to send to the Centennial the log which General Stark left half sawed in his mill when he heard of the battle of Lexington. It is fortunate that the General did not go back and finish the work.

The Okeola Outline declares in favor of Senator Ferry's re-election to the United States Senate, and says:

We have been informed by Senator Ferry's most intimate friends that he is not a candidate for the Vice Presidency, nor has he ever expressed a desire for that office; and any movement in that direction has never been encouraged by him.

The Democratic Enquirer, (Democratic), having read the Pennsylvania Democratic platform, raised up its voice and lamented in this fashion:

"The Democrats of Pennsylvania met in convention and sent out a declaration of faith—of faith in the potency of trimming and time-serving. They are evidently waiting on the Wall street machine at Washington, tremulous before the national banks, and hoping to carry the country on the grand proposition that a Republican man is more likely to fracture the earth's commandment than a Democratic man."

The Adrian Times says of the Hayes movement in connection with the Presidency:

"The reputation is local rather than national. Two time may come when he will come to be as well known to the people of the whole country as he is now to the citizens of Ohio. When that time comes, Gov. Hayes will receive the recognition his worth demands, and now the use of his name in connection with the Presidency is premature. Republicans have used to exercise great care and judgment in the selection of a candidate at Cincinnati. This time more than ever in the history of the country, his name selected for a candidate rather than any set of resolutions, will be the platform. For this reason the necessity of choosing some one of national reputation, and whose name is synonymous with what is best and most hopeful in politics, becomes apparent. There are two men whose names stand identified in public opinion with what is best and truest in political life: Bristow and Washburn."

The Mason County Record comes out for Heston for President. It says:

"There are indications that Secretary Bristow is advancing toward the front, if he has not already attained that position, in the list of candidates mentioned in connection with the nomination for President at the Cincinnati Convention. Bristow's bold, determined, persistent and unflinching warfare upon the gigantic whisky frauds, and his success in bringing them to light and exposing to punishment men, irrespective of person or position, connected with these frauds upon the Government, have revealed in him qualifications of incorruptibility and a zeal in hunting and rooting out public thieves and putting a stop to these wholesale robberies upon the National Treasury, which should command a premium in the administration of Governmental affairs. These are times that demand, as the very first consideration in the selection of public officials, men of known integrity and purity—men who when tried have proved themselves incorruptible, if such can be found. These qualifications, united with acknowledged ability, must not only insure success in the election if such a man is put forward as the standard bearer of the Republican party in the coming campaign, but will give us an honorable administration, upon such principles of justice and honesty as shall secure the respect and esteem of the whole people and be the glory of the nation."

We get a fine sample of democratic "reform" as compared with republican economy, in the way the contingent expenses are managed under Secretary Bristow on one hand and under the confederate house of representatives on the other. He has made the appropriation last for over nine months, and then shut down on any further outlay for gas, water, or fuel, because it is strictly forbidden by law to incur debt in advance. The deficiency of the whole country is estimated at only $100,000, and the expenses of long evening sessions at the whisky trials have been great. Now the confederate house has used up in four months the appropriation for contingent expenses designed to last a whole year, and a deficiency bill has already been introduced, calling for $60,000. One of the ways in which the money went was to employ, without authority of law, 16 extra assistants for the ex-rebel door-keeper, most of whom were the confederate gray in the "late unpleasantness." They must be rewarded, even if the treasury is unlawfully bled to do it.—Lawson Republican.

Judge Whitney of the United States Court, on April 6th decided that the letters patent issued to Albert S. Southworth for an improvement in plate holders for cameras are void and of no effect; that Southworth is not the original discoverer and inventor of the improvement he claims. This decision is estimated to be worth half a million dollars to the photographers of the United States.

The Manifest Times and Standard vigorously oppose the renomination of Mr. Hubbell to Congress from the Ninth District. It says:

"Mr. Hubbell was renominated when the Lower Peninsula had a large majority in the convention; he was nominated in a spirit of magnanimity, and without the votes of Manifeste county he could not have been nominated. In his third term vote he was successful, and he has no claims for a second term. This certainly is all that party usage requires, and he has no claims for a third term and if under these circumstances, he should be forced upon the people by a convention so arranged as to give his part of the district largely the advantage over the remainder, his friends will not only injure the cause of his party, but endanger if not defeat his election."

The Flint Globe, discussing Presidential candidates says:

"New York wants Mr. Conkling, Pennsylvania wants Gen. Hartranft, which means in substance, Senator Cameron. Ohio wants Gen. Hayes, and Indiana instructs its delegates to support Mr. Morton. Now it is morally certain that neither of the gentlemen named, unless possibly it may be Hayes, can be or ought to be nominated. Senators Conkling, Cameron and Morton are men of unquestioned ability, they have done the country vast services in time when men of their peculiar talents were required. The nation owes them a debt of gratitude for services rendered in the past, as it owes grateful remembrance to Grant and Sherman and John Butler. But it does not necessarily follow that they should all be Presidents. Nor does it follow that because they had the talents to make them useful in time of war, or the administrative period immediately succeeding the war, that they are qualified for the exigencies which present themselves to-day. This is a time demanding cool judgment and the exercise of the judicial faculty rather than the sentimental. Neither of these three Senators can be elected President, and it is folly to waste any breath or time discussing the feasibility of nominating any one of them."

The following despatches to the Detroit Daily News, indicate a political movement of considerable significance:

CINCINNATI, April 7.—Secretary Bristow, on his way to Louisville for a short vacation among his friends, remained here several days and was visited by hundreds of admirers. He left for Louisville yesterday morning. Political circles here are considerably moved by his visit and the expressions of admiration it elicited, and it is said confidently that the quarters that the event was the initiative of a strong movement whose aim is to place him at once in the fore-front of the Republican candidates for president. It is certain that his departure was immediately followed by a very numerous and extended conference of leading Republicans and Independents, among whom were Murat Halstead, of the Commercial, and Richard Smith, of the Gazette. Henry Watson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, is also in town, recognizing the movement, and it is said, not altogether disposed, under certain conditions, to go into it. Halstead left for New York in the evening, where it is asserted he has engaged the most Sam. Bowles, of the Springfield Republican, at the Brevoort House, and there perfect the plans for pushing the Bristow movement.

Politicians here regard the movement as a very formidable one, and as placing Bristow's chances far in advance. New York, April 7.—A special from Washington this afternoon says a political intrigue of gigantic proportions recently came to light. A new liberal movement is incubating which aims to be of far more consequence than theiasco which resulted in the Cincinnati nominations four years ago. It is asserted that Carl Schurz, Horace White, Murat Halstead, Samuel Bowles, Col. Grosvener, David A. Wells, George William Curtis, and about thirty noted literateurs and amateur politicians, have been quietly organized for the last year, and that they have pushed out wide ramifications through the principal States of the Union. They are working energetically in secret, and will hold no open convention. The significance and importance of this concave have not been recognized, but it is at this moment inside the Republican party, to control the organization, and failing in that, to arrange for a tremendous bolt in the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati, and nominate a candidate of its own and force him on the Democratic convention which meets in St. Louis, fortnight after.

The Lansing Republican has the following in regard to candidates for Congress in the Sixth District:

"For Representative to Congress from this district, Daniel Crossman, of Williamson, favorably regarded by his friends in this county who know his diligent and faithful service as their Representative, as Clerk of the House, and in other offices where business ability and integrity are required. Other candidates named are Gen. O. L. Spaulding, of St. Johns, R. E. Trowbridge, of Bath, Mark S. Brewer and Henry W. Lord, of Ponose. Gen. Spaulding performed valiant service in the army, was Secretary of State for four years, and now holds an unimportant Federal office. Mr. Trowbridge served the people very acceptably for six years in Congress during the rebellion and the reconstruction period. Mr. Brewer was an influential member of the State for four years, and now holds an unimportant Federal office. Mr. Lord has been United States consul at Manchester, England, and is a man of fine scholarship."

The Boston Journal—one of the thoroughly representative Republican papers of New England—makes these comments upon Mr. Curtis's plucky fight and incisive speech at Syracuse:

"The Republican masses of the country will honor George William Curtis for his bold, able and just remarks in the Republican State Convention of New York. He has interpreted their sentiment with perfect fidelity. They are determined at this time to direct the organization of every state and to go into the impending Presidential campaign under the white banner of purification and reform. And as Mr. Curtis says, if there is any liability on their part, it will come from the fact that the policy of Republicans alone. The country is honest, and is therefore unwilling to trust the Democratic party; and all the Republicans have to do is to set up their original principles and to the inspiration of the great body of their party. Now the first thing to be done is to secure the opportunity for these honest masses to make themselves freely, fairly and fully heard through their delegates at the Cincinnati Convention."

"And here, we take it, is the exact point of Mr. Curtis's demonstration in the New York Convention. He had nothing to say against Senator Conkling, whether he was for or against him; but he was not for him, and the point he made was that there was no such unanimity among the Republicans of the State as would be implied by adopting resolutions in favor of Mr. Conkling. We all know that Mr. Curtis did not state it—that certain classes of politicians are generally to be represented in such conventions out of all proportion to their real strength; and that the policy of the party is to have control largely of party machinery, and to take the case of Mr. Conkling's most effective managers in New York—they may comprise the force of Federal office-holders in the State. The power they wield, then, is a power that tells peculiarly upon candor and delegates. But when it comes to election day the great preponderance of voters must be drawn from outside quarters, and if there is dissension or disapproval there, all the management in the world will be of no avail. This is the truth which it was the unpleasant duty of Mr. Curtis to bring before the Republican Convention of New York, and he did it with a manliness and valor which deserved success, if they did not win it. And we think that, under the circumstances, Mr. Curtis substantially accomplished his object. He proclaimed to the world that the Republican masses of New York are divided in their Presidential preferences, and that they mean to have the field of choice kept open till the meeting of the Cincinnati Convention, unless risks are to be run which it would be foolishly to do at this juncture; and one hundred and thirteen members of the convention—nearly one-third of the whole—attested by their votes that they agreed with him. The position of New York, therefore, cannot now be misunderstood, as it might have been if Mr. Curtis had kept silent, and the delegation at Cincinnati will assume the just position when Mr. Conkling is out of the way."

"A like duty may be said to be performed for the Republicans of other States, although the special exigencies may vary."

The River and Harbor Appropriation Bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce to the House of Representatives on Monday last, and was passed under a suspension of the rules, without debate, by a vote of 171 to 50. THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND.—We have just received VERNER'S last famous story, "The Mysterious Island—Dropped from the Clouds." It is an intensely interesting book, by the celebrated author of "20,000 Leagues under the Sea." "Tour of the World in 80 Days," &c., and gives the exciting adventures of five Union prisoners who, during our late great war, escaped from Richmond, Va., in a captured balloon! They were driven by a wild hurricane across the entire continent, and fell upon an uninhabited island in the Pacific Ocean. Here they lived several years, unable to escape. Finally a vessel appeared, but proved to be a pirate ship, and instead of rescuing, endeavored to murder them. During the combat a mysterious agent destroyed their vessel! The castaways then frequent exciting adventures with wild men and aboriginals, and with many very mysterious incidents that were apparently supernatural. Their ingenious contrivances to better their condition are highly interesting. In short, it is Verner's best book, and that is the highest possible commendation.

The ordinary price of "Dropped from the Clouds" is $2.00, but the copy before us, "The Lakeside Library" edition, handsomely illustrated, is sent prepaid for only 15 cents. It is also sold by all Newsdealers. If you want a genuine treat, get it. Address, DONNELLEY, LOYD & CO., Publishers, Chicago, Illinois.
